PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

Damian Radcliffe is the Carolyn S. Chambers Professor in Journalism at the University of Oregon, a Fellow of the Tow Center for Digital Journalism at Columbia University, an Honorary Research Fellow at Cardiff School of Journalism, Media and Cultural Studies (JOMEC) at Cardiff University (the UK's oldest journalism school) and a Fellow of The Royal Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce (RSA).

Damian's work has encompassed all media sectors: Industry (commercial, public, non-profit/civil society), Government, Regulatory and Academic – and all media platforms (digital / online, TV, radio and print).

Between 1995-2015, whilst based in the UK and Middle East, his experience included four years working in UK commercial radio, eight years working for – and with – the BBC, four years at the UK Communications Regulator, Ofcom; and three years at Qatar's Ministry of Information and Communications Technology (ictQATAR).

Damian moved to the USA and the University of Oregon in 2015, where he teaches classes in advanced reporting, audio storytelling, social media and the business of journalism. For every course he has taught, his evaluations are above the University and J-School average. Alongside his University service and classroom commitments, he has contributed regular columns for the BBC, CBS interactive (ZDNet), Digital Content Next, Huffington Post, MediaShift, TheMediaBriefing, IJNET, What's New in Publishing and Your Middle East.

Damian's journalistic, research and teaching interests build on his previous and on-going professional practice; with a particular focus on digital trends, social media, technology, the business of media and the evolution of journalism, and the role played by media and technology in the Middle East.

His research has had more than 539,000 views (to late-October 2017) on LinkedIn's SlideShare platform alone, and was in their Top 1% of most viewed content in 2013 and 2014. In 2013, he was one of 50 global participants in the Internet Society's Next Generation Leaders program.

Whilst still a student at Oxford University he was Head of Programs for the launch of the UK's first volunteer run commercial FM radio station, he produced the BBC's first permanent TV app in 2001, and between 2005-08 he expanded the partnership between the charity CSV and the BBC's local services into an award-winning, multi-media operation. This latter role involved leading 70 staff and 300 volunteers, across 40 project locations (including 6 direct reports), as well as managing relationships with senior BBC partners.

At Ofcom, Damian worked with stakeholders on topics such as local TV, the future of Public Service Broadcasting and media literacy; as well as engagement with the UK's nascent hyperlocal sector. Damian authored the UK's first review of hyperlocal media in 2012, and was part of the Cardiff University team who launched the world's first MOOC in Community Journalism during 2014. Nearly 9,000 learners from 113 countries participated in 2014, growing to 10,000 new learners in 2015. He published a new report on the state of UK hyperlocal media in 2015.

Between 2012-14 Damian launched a research program at Qatar's Ministry of Information and Communications Technology, exploring the impact of ICT on society and emerging technologies. His team published 100+ articles, studies, presentations and infographics in English and Arabic in this time.

At Oregon, Damian has introduced new and highly rated classes to the J-School curriculum, established a high-profile program for external speakers "Demystifying Media" and expanded the channels for his creative output.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

Oregon

- Conceptualized and delivered four new classes (Audio Storytelling, Social Media for Journalists, Journalism Today and Super-J in NYC). Evaluations exceed University and J-School average.
- Devised and implemented new speaker series (Demystifying Media). 16 events were held in 2016-17, bringing new academic and industry speakers into the SOJC. Series outputs include: recorded lecture, podcast, KWVA podcast, MediaShift write-up, TV studio interview and more.
- Co-lead for the inaugural Super-J NYC Experience, taking 14 journalism majors to New York (13 in 2017) to meet industry experts at outlets like The New York Times, ProPublica, The Marshall Project, CBS Interactive, as well as researchers and teachers at CUNY and ColumbiaJ-School.
- UO lead for ProPublica/Google project “Electionland” – working with 6+ SOJC classes to maximize and support involvement from both students and faculty. More than 70 Oregon students participated in an Election Day newsroom examining reports of voter fraud. The project – which featured 13 J-Schools and other industry partners – such as Google News Lab, WNYC, the USA TODAY NETWORK, Univision News, and First Draft. Electionland won the Planned News/Events, Large Newsroom category, 2017 Online News Association Awards.
- Raised the profile of the school through:
 - Research (3 reports, sole author; 5 reports/books as co-author, 8 book chapters, including in-press work; 4 journal articles; 4 conference papers)
 - Public speaking (27 presentations given, 6 sessions chaired, 20 guest lectures on campus, 5 industry training events delivered at) includes conferences hosted in Paris, London, Washington DC, New York, Barcelona and Toronto, and locally by the Agora Journalism Center, the American Press Institute and the Oregon chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists.
 - Creative work (128 popular press articles and podcasts produced)
 - Media mentions/interviews (149) and;
 - Events (24 organized) (All figures 15 September 2015 – 25 May 2018).
- U.S. Government sponsored/invited Speaking Tour to Germany, seven-day tour of German-American Institutes in southern Germany (November 2017), supported by the Economic Security and Global Affairs team at the U.S. Embassy Berlin.
- Authored content about developments in the media and journalism for new outlets such as The Conversation and MediaShift, as well as outlets with whom I have an established relationship e.g. BBC College of Journalism, TheMediaBriefing and Journalism.co.uk. Supported students to get their work published by these channels.

Qatar

- Led a team of four Arab Nationals (11 personnel over 3 years) to establish a new regional research program on the societal impact of ICT. Published 32 market round-ups (English and Arabic); a MENA wide study of attitudes to data privacy, and analysis of emerging social media platforms in Qatar. Studies enjoyed over 265,000 views during this time.
- Academic and research partnerships included: Oxford Internet Institute (Oxford University), Cornell University, Georgetown University, Northwestern University, Qatar University and Carnegie Mellon University; Ipsos MENA, Nielsen, Toluna and Edelman PR.
- Member of the Steering Committee for Qatar's National Broadband Plan, ictQATAR's internal Policy and Sub Tender Committees and the Board of the Internet Society Qatar.

Ofcom

- Authored the UK's first landscape review of hyper local and community media. The report was used to launch 'Destination Local' - a new £4m ($6.6m) media innovation fund.
- Policy Manager for three of Ofcom's six external advisory bodies, with a key focus on service availability/quality, media plurality, media literacy, SMEs and innovation.
- Oversaw input from 20 non-Executives into the full scope of Ofcom's research and policy work.
- Scoped and launched a public facing website for Ofcom's Advisory Committees; and organized 22 events for stakeholders on emerging media policy issues.

CSV Media

- Led 70 staff and 300 volunteers, across 40 project locations (including 6 direct reports). Managed a £3.5m ($5.7m) annual budget, with a further £1m ($1.6m) 'in kind' support.
- Ran and expanded a multi-award winning partnership between CSV and the BBC which generated 33,285 broadcasts and worked with 3,672 partners to engage 165,190 citizens in community based civic, health and lifelong learning activity (2005-08).
- Ran Volunteer Britain, a film competition to showcase citizen activity. Produced a highlight show shown on the Community TV Channel and at 12 cinemas across the UK.
- Led 10 UK Online Centers delivering digital training to 5,000 beneficiaries p.a. (2003-5)

BBC

- Created the governance structure - and ran top-level decision making bodies - for the BBC's £110m p.a. digital operations, following the creation of the New Media Division.
- Devised and implemented an internal communications and knowledge management strategy for the 1,200 BBC Online staff found across seven program divisions.
- Launch Producer for the BBC's first permanent TV app; available to 5 million users (2001).

TLRC

- Head of Programs for the launch of the UK's first volunteer run 24/7 FM radio station.

PARTNERSHIPS

Collaboration and the building of strategic alliances have been at the forefront of Damian's work.

Partners worked with over the past decade include:

Northwestern University in Qatar, Carnegie Mellon University in Qatar, Qatar University, Nielsen, Oxford Internet Institute, ISIS Consulting at Oxford University, Ipsos MENA, Edelman, Internet Society, UNESCO, United Nations Alliance of Civilization (UNAOC), Doha Center for Media Freedom, TFour.me, GROW Qatar, I Love Qatar, Doha Tweetups, BT, University of Salford, Talk About Local, Futuregov, Huffington Post, CBS Interactive, NESTA, Age UK, Digital UK, Screen Yorkshire, UK National Media Museum, UK Department for Business, UK Department for Culture, Media and Sport, Digital Outreach Limited, BBC College of Journalism, BBC England, BBC Scotland, BBC Northern Ireland, BBC Video Nation, BBC Big Screens, BBC Telling Lives, BBC Capture Wales, Media Trust, Coalition to end Child Poverty, Better Government for Older People, Community Channel, Help the Aged, Tinder Foundation, UK Online, Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation, Independent Age, Tesco, v, Screen West England, Screen Midlands, Picturehouse Cinemas, Watershed Media, Media Zoo and the Joseph Rowntree Foundation.

FUNDING

- Agora Faculty Fellowship 2018-19, University of Oregon, PI/Author, Local News roundtables, $20,000.
- Agora Faculty Fellowship 2016-17, University of Oregon, PI/Author, Understanding innovation and civic engagement in the Pacific Northwest, $20,107, to be completed by end of June 2017.
- Tow Center for Digital Journalism, Columbia University, Summer Fellowship 2016-17, Co-PI/Author, Local News in a Digital World: Small Market Newspapers in a Digital Age, $5,000 for transcription, 6 months Columbia PhD student as RA (amount not disclosed) and travel to launch event in New York at Columbia.

Prior to joining the University of Oregon, Damian secured over £3.5m ($5.86m) whilst at the UK NGO, CSV (2003-08). [NB: The organization is now known as Volunteering Matters.]

He attracted funding from bodies such as the European Union, National Lottery, University for Industry, Ofcom, the Heritage Lottery, and numerous Government Agencies, including; the Department of Health, Home Office, Cabinet Office and Central Office of Information.

This funding was used to deliver a range of training, outreach and media activity, all designed to promote active communities and give a voice to partners often on issues which were overlooked by the media.

Damian also contributed to wider funding efforts including £2m youth volunteering initiative – Agents4Change – funded by Tesco and the volunteering charity, v.

After successfully lobbying Digital UK to set up a targeted help program to support groups on the periphery of the BBC's Help Scheme for TV Switchover, Damian co-devised the delivery model for this work and was part of the team which successfully bid for this tender. Digital Outreach Limited, a new body created through a partnership of four different agencies, was then established to deliver this work.
